ROLEPLAY

Teacher – a member of the board of supervisors/ interviewer

You are looking for young people, mostly teenagers, who will prove to be courageous and creative as well as sufficiently physically strong enough to participate in your new international project.

The project is called “Space Travels in the Future”.

The project is meant to prepare young people for some kind of space travels in the future.

During the interview you try to learn about each candidate as much as possible and what their parents’ opinion is. You need their approval.

ROLEPLAY

Student – a young candidate to join the project/interviewee

There is an international project you have learned about recently. They are looking for youngsters to join the project “Space Travels in the Future”.

This looks so attractive to you!

You have applied and are ready to persuade the board that you can handle extreme, complex, and even dangerous situations. No doubt you could master physically demanding tasks as well.

You care about your diet and keep fit on a regular basis. Tough situations have always been a welcome challenge. However, your parents might cause some troubles.

Speaker 1 (male voice): Last Thursday was just a disaster! It was Valentine's Day and I wanted to surprise my girlfriend, so I booked a really posh restaurant in the city centre. I picked her up in the evening, and she came out of the house looking so beautiful in her new dress. We got to the restaurant, which looked lovely with those candles and flowers everywhere, and we went in. And then it happened! The restaurant had absolutely no record of our booking! They were very apologetic, but they were completely full, as were all the other restaurants in town that night. We had no other choice but to go home to my place and eat pizza from the freezer. Luckily, we laughed about it but it was so disappointing, really.

Speaker 2 (female voice): We both got home from work last Friday quite tired. Neither of us could face doing the cooking, so in a moment we decided otherwise. We went to eat out. We caught the bus into town wondering if we could possibly get a table anywhere, as it's always rather busy on Fridays. But we decided that we'd get some takeaway if we were unlucky. When we got to our favourite Thai restaurant, it was so busy! But the waiter was nice and said that if we came back in an hour, he'd squeeze us in! So, we had a small drink in the pub across the road, then we had a great meal, and went home feeling excited and relaxed.

Speaker 3 (male voice): My parents wanted to take me out for dinner last week to celebrate passing my exams, but they booked a restaurant on the evening of our class party, which was an unfortunate idea! I was having such good fun at the party that I stayed till the end and didn't get home till 7:30, which was when the table had been booked for! So, we rushed into town and got there at ten past eight. Fortunately for me, especially, the restaurant had kept our table. The only problem seemed to be how slow the service really was. But we didn't complain at all. We'd been late in the first place!

Speaker 4 (female voice): I went out with my friends at the weekend for a meal. This time we wanted to eat Chinese for a change, so my friend Tom had booked the restaurant for all 6 of us. We all went to the Jasmine Flower Garden as Tom had told us to, but when we got there, the restaurant couldn't find any record of our booking! Tom was a bit cross, and insisted that he had booked the table, but it turned out that he had actually booked their sister restaurant, the Jasmine Flower Palace on the other side of town! Tom felt such a fool, but the restaurant owner was very understanding and found a table for us. He also phoned the other restaurant, which belonged to his brother-in-law.

Speaker 5 (male voice): Last Saturday was very nearly a disaster. Some friends were visiting, so I booked us an Italian restaurant in town for an evening out. I also booked a taxi for us all, but the weather was terrible. It was raining cats and dogs and the road at the bottom of the hill flooded, and the taxi couldn't get through for a long time. So, when it finally got us to the restaurant, we were very late indeed. Unfortunately, the restaurant had given our table to someone else. I must say they were very apologetic, though, and offered us a half-price takeaway with a free bottle of wine. Well, we ended up going home with loads of food and drink and had a lovely evening anyway.
